AVRAHAM MORDECHAI (MONYE) HIMELSTEIN 1905-1974 (Polish spelling Himelsztejn)

Avraham Mordechai Himmelstein was born in Warsaw on December 16, 1905, to his father Reuven Yehuda Hacohen, (1843-1929) Rosh Yeshiva in White Russia, and mother, Peshe, (nee Rappoport, died 1916) whose sweet voice and deep musicality left an indelible impression on him. He joined the local synagogue choir at age 6, singing there for 12 years, where he absorbed the traditional tunes of the prayers from Reb Yehoshua Reichstaler, the local Davener.

His formal teachers included A. Davidowitz, the distinguished choirmaster of the Zalman Nozhik Shul; M. Shneur, conductor of the Great Popular Choir in Warsaw; Itzhak Schlossberg, conductor of the Jewish Theatre Orchestra; David Eisenstadt, choirmaster of the Great Shul in Tlomatzka Street; and Leon Zelman, conductor of the Popular Choir in Warsaw. By the age of 14, he was conducting four-voice choirs. For two years, he attended the Warsaw State Academy, followed by a series of performances as conductor of choirs with the great cantors of the time in Warsaw, such as Gershon Sirota, and others. He was also very active in conducting youth choirs, including one consisting of 140 choristers.

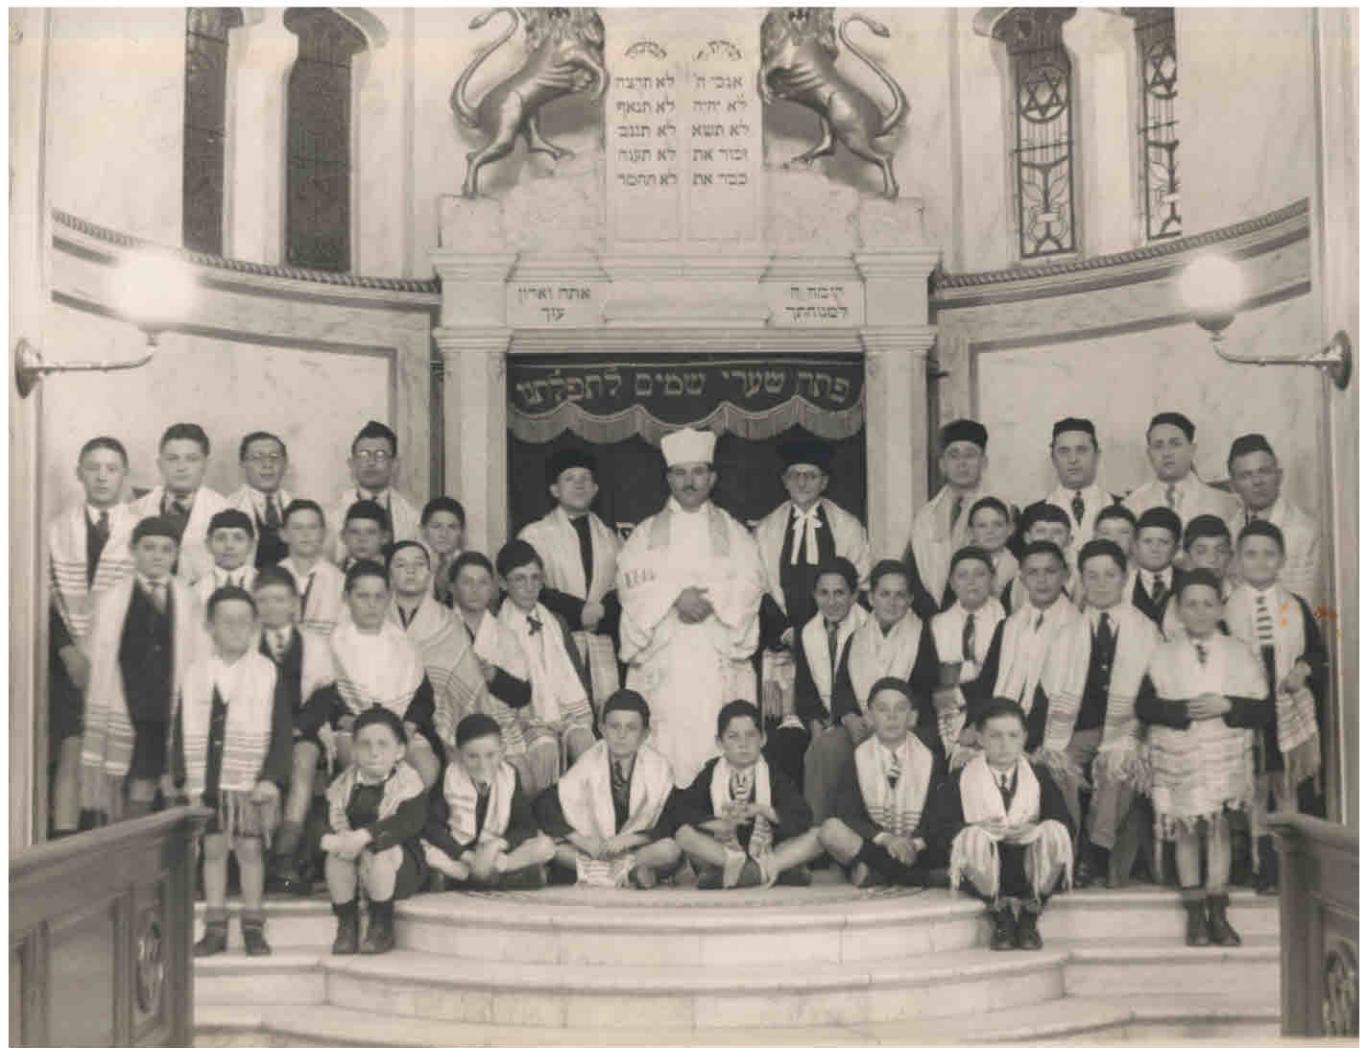

In 1936, he accepted a call from Tifereth Israel Synagogue in Rowland Street, Cape Town, to act as its choir director. He arrived in South Africa, bringing with him enthusiastic recommendations from great Polish musicians, such as David Eisenstadt, Avraham Tzvi Davidowitz, Pinchas Sherman, Moshe Koussevitzky, and others. He was accorded excellent reviews and earned an outstanding reputation in the fields of conducting, composition and arrangement of music for cantor and choir.

From Cape Town, he moved to Johannesburg, first to the Yeoville Synagogue, then to the Great Synagogue in Wolmarans Street, the largest synagogue in Johannesburg, and the seat of the Chief Rabbi. In addition, he was active in training and conducting choirs for various Salutes to Israel pageants.

Monye Himmelstein regarded the continuity and fostering of chazanut and of choral shul music as a holy mission, and he devoted much time to training both cantors and choir directors in the proper nusach. Among his protégés, are some of the best-known cantors such as Philip Badash, Benjamin Muller, and others. In later years he turned to composing chazanut for cantor and choir. Two books of his compositions, Lammatzeach, (in 3 part harmony) and Lachazan, appeared during his lifetime (1971 and 1973.) This new publication, SHIREI T'FILAH LACHAZAN, now consists of works for voice and piano, as well as cantorial recitatives. This volume includes many unpublished compositions.

ה איר תשע"ד May 5, 2014

I first met Abraham Himmelstein on August 1st, 1963. That was my first day in Johannesburg, having arrived there a few hours earlier from Israel. This encounter was to change my understanding of the meaning of synagogue music. In his native Warsaw, where he had studied music and conducted choirs, he acquired the tools of liturgical music which made his name famous throughout the Jewish world.

Upon his arrival in South Africa he conducted choirs in Cape town and a few years later moved to Johannesburg, where he was quickly acknowledged as THE Master of choir conducting.

He conducted synagogue choirs which consisted of boy sopranos and altos and adult tenors, baritones and basses. He always chose compositions which combined cantorial soloist recitatives with choirs and often utilized compositions that required the choir to hum with harmonic chords. This created an illusion that an organ was accompanying the chazan during Divine services and helped to create an atmosphere of awe in the synagogue.

As an educator and as a person involved in Jewish life, Himmelstein was concerned with the future of choir singing in the community. In spite of his preparation of many boys in his choirs to eventually sing as adult singers, he was eventually faced with a shortage of child singers. He therefore decided to re-arrange many of his liturgical compositions for three adult voices, rather than continuing with four voice choirs consisting of boys and men. He succeeded in this endeavor and created beautiful harmonies that were no less beautiful than four part harmonies.

He understood boys' vocal development and when a boy encountered the first sign of change of his voice - normally at around the age of 13 - he insisted that the boy stop singing and only resume singing at the age of 18.

Himmelstein wrote many recitatives for a chazan, both for services and concerts. Most of his cantorial recitatives were written for cantors with tenor voices. In the 1960s, when he became the conductor of the Great Synagogue in Wolmarans Street in Johannesburg, he wrote recitatives for Cantor Abraham Reich, the chief cantor in that synagogue. Both worked extremely closely in creating beautiful services in that imposing synagogue. Himmelstein's recitatives for baritone used the lower range of this voice in expressing the passion and pleading effect of the prayer to the full.

He was always prolific in composing melodies, and these were all of the highest quality. He wrote for both tenors and baritones and drew much inspiration from Biblical texts. It is interesting to note that each song, drawn mainly from the Bible, expresses certain of his personal needs. I often feel his personality in his music. I feel his musical uniqueness, his sense of aesthetics, and his need to connect to the European Jewish world that was destroyed during the Holocaust.

Himmelstein left a rich legacy of Jewish music that will be used, sung and performed for many years to come. I congratulate his son Lior for editing his music, re-arranging it and bringing it to life again.

כה איר תשע"ז

I met Reverend Himelstein, for the first time in 1966, on my arrival from Rhodesia to South Africa, as Chazan of the Pretoria Hebrew Congregation.

I soon realized that Reverend Himelstein was a Talmid Chacham with vast knowledge of the Hebrew language and of Jewish liturgical music. It was clear to me that his encyclopedic Jewish musical knowledge stemmed from his pre-war Warsaw experiences, surrounded by world-renowned chazanim and musicians.

Reverend Himelstein composed music for cantor and choir based on his extensive practical experience as a choirmaster and his profound knowledge of Nusach and Chazanut. His personality too is reflected in his passionate and enthusiastic compositions and style.

As a young Chazan I was fortunate enough to have Reverend Himelstein's personal guidance in the interpretation of Chazanut, which I remember and cherish to this day.

Reverend Himelstein's legacy to Synagogue music will live for generations.
